IDEAS.

He who has virtue of his own need not boast of his ancestors.

You can't be mean and happy any more than an apple can be sour and sweet.

If the stove smokes give it a thorough cleaning; but if the farmer—well, we give it up.

Do not lay all your troubles to bad luck. It is the man who turns even bad luck to account that comes out first in the race.—Farm Journal.

TAKE NOTICE.

of Chicago, lectures in the Tabernacle to-night on his recent trip to the Holy Land.

He preaches at College Chapel Service Sunday night.

FROM THE WIDE WORLD.

Dryfus marched in Zola's funeral procession.

Dr. Joseph Parker, of City Temple, London, had a sudden relapse, and is unable to preach.

General Zontcheff, president of the Macedonian committee, has again escaped from prison, and has gone to Macedonia. The insurrection is becoming serious.

Sir Chas. Elliott, commissioner for British East Africa, is the first traveler who has made in safety the journey through Uganda, the upper Nile district and the Sudan.

IN OUR OWN COUNTRY.

The street car strike in New Orleans has caused great excitement, and the troops are being called out.

The G. A. R. encampment at Washington decided upon San Francisco as the place of next year's encampment.

A woman recently died in Chicago whose recollections of distinguished people indicate that she was 132 years old.

The strike of miners of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania, which has been going on for two or three months, is likely to be settled by arbitration.

Near Lincoln, Nebraska, robbers held up a train on the 11th inst., wrecked the safe by the use of explosives, and secured $50,000 in gold.

The Presbyterian church at Goshen, Ind., which will soon celebrate its fiftieth anniversary, has had the same pastor from the beginning, Rev. H. L. Vannoy.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

A home for old Confederate veterans will be dedicated at Pewee Valley, near Louisville, Oct. 23.

A corn stalk grown near Richmond is sixteen feet long, and measures four and a half inches in diameter at the ground.

The cash prize of $10,000 recently won in a horse race at Lexington was given by the owner of the horse to the driver, Fred McKay.

The Christian Endeavor convention for the Fourth Kentucky district, composed of seven counties, will be held at Millersburg Oct. 25-27.

Rev. P. C. Eversole, late M. E. pastor at College Hill, Madison county, has been stricken with small-pox at his new home in Mercer county.

The monument erected at the Perryville battlefield in memory of the Confederate dead buried there was unveiled Oct. 8 in the presence of a vast throng.

Miss Lattie Jones, of Winchester, furnishes an example of the triumph of modern surgery. Last year her limb was badly shattered in a runaway accident, and the bones were wired together until they should unite. She has just gone to a hospital to have the wires removed.

CORNER-STONE LAYING.

To-morrow and Saturday will be notable days in the history of Berea. On the 1:20 p. m. train to-morrow, in a special Pullman provided by Col. Roht. T. Lincoln, son of Abraham Lincoln, and president of the Pullman Car company, will arrive a company of ladies and gentlemen from Cincinnati and other points on the road to take part in the corner-stone laying of the new Men's Industrial building, now in course of erection. In this company will be Walter H. Page, editor of "World's Work" and "Country Life in America," and other prominent speakers. Mr. Page and others will give addresses in the Tabernacle Friday night at 7:30.

On Friday night the 7:20 L. & N. passenger train will be run to Berea from Richmond with a hundred invited guests for the lecture, returning to Richmond after the lecture. On Saturday at 10 a. m. will be the laying of the Corner stone of the Men's Industrial building, and Mr. Walter H. Page will deliver the oration. The visitors will be taken to points of interest in and around Berea, and will also have an opportunity to inspect the College and its departments.

DEPOPULATING THE COUNTRY.

Our Educational System Tends That Way.

Nearly all of our boys and girls have to leave the country in order to fit themselves for anything of use or enterprise. They have to go to the city to fit, and afterward they do not, of course, desire to return to country life which has no place prepared to receive them. Those who do not go to the city thus to fit themselves for higher things go as unskilled laborers.

There are not in the country many of the former day facilities for preparing for even the humblest mechanical occupations. Even farming of an intelligent sort has become in too many instances a lost art.—Edward P. Pressy.

HOW TO BUILD UP THE COUNTRY.

Our Present Education is Tearing it Down.

The country school is single-handed, powerless to save our country boys and girls from making our country and city problem worse and worse. We need industrial training more than anything else. We should teach a variety of the ordinary industrial trades. But particularly we should foster the hand arts and crafts that are peculiarly adapted for practice in an atmosphere of quiet, close to nature, and where there are vast treasures of time running to waste from lack of employment. We have a list of more than thirty arts and crafts and small industries well adapted to country conditions and which are already successful in different places. We should make a good deal of reading in history, literature and the sciences and the study of science directly from nature. And so we shall train up a capable and hopeful generation for the self existence of a normal country life; and those we send to the city will have each his or her craft in hand, will have ideals and some ability to do all they dare dream of.—Pressy's Solution of the Country Problem.

Let us provide adequate accommodation and comfortable equipment with a competent teacher in charge of each school and mark the effect before we urge compulsory school attendance. Let the school become a centre of neighborhood interest. Convince the community of this efficiency and value by winning the respect and loyalty of pupils and patrons. When this is accomplished the question of illiteracy in the rural districts will be solved.—CHAS. J. PARKER of North Carolina.

Stricken With Paralysis.

Henderson Grinett, of this place, was stricken with partial paralysis and completely lost the use of one arm and side. After being treated by an eminent physician for quite a while without relief, my wife recommended Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and after using two bottles of it he is almost entirely cured.—Geo. R. McDonald, Man, Logan county, W. Va. Several other very remarkable cures of partial paralysis have been effected by the use of this liniment. It is most widely known, however, as a cure for rheumatism, sprains and bruises. Sold by S. E. Welch, Jr.

BEREA LYCEUM COURSE.

The many inquiries in regard to the Lyceum Course for the coming winter render proper a full announcement as soon as is possible of the attractions to be expected. Aside from the single entertainment already given by itself the Course will consist of five numbers. These include two persons who were with us last year, and were most acceptable to our people; another whom the manager of the Course has seen and heard, and two so emphatically endorsed by those who have heard them that the Course may be expected to be one of the best we ever have had. Following are the names and dates:

Saturday, Dec. 13—Miss Katharine Eggleston, the charming reader and monologist.

Monday, Jan. 5—James A. Becker, the orator from the Black Hills.

Monday, Feb. 2—Phil Hunter, the Buckeye "Wizard," with his company—a marvelous exhibition of sleight of hand.

Monday, Feb. 23—Milton W. Brown, in many places called the greatest orator in their course.

Monday, March 16—Ralph Padlette, one of the most irresistibly funny men of the present generation.

We are able to give our people the above magnificent Course at about half the admission fee charged in most places, viz.: Season tickets, $1; children under twelve, 50c; single admission, 25c and 15c, unless it be decided to charge more for the Phil. Hunter troupe.

Cut out this announcement for reference. L. V. DODDIE.

THE HOME.

BED-MAKING FOR THE SICK.

As Taught in the Home Nursing Class at Berea College.

THE KIND OF BED.—An iron bedstead is best for the sickroom because it can be easily washed and disinfected. For the sake of the nurse it should be high. To raise an ordinary bed use blocks hollowed out to receive the legs of the bed.

Good woven-wire springs and a good mattress make the most comfortable bed. A straw bed with a cotton pad or comfort over it will do well. Never put a sick person on a feather-bed. (1) Feathers are too heating, and do not allow proper ventilation. (2) It is almost impossible to disinfect a feather-bed. (3) Dust and fine particles of the feathers will work out of a feather-bed and are very injurious to the lungs. (4) They are easily disarranged and cause discomfort to the patient.

PLACE OF THE BED.—Draw the bed from the wall far enough to allow the nurse to pass around easily. This helps also in the ventilation. Pure air is one of Nature's best medicines, and every sick person should have the benefit of it.

MAKING THE BED.—1. Turn over the mattress. This gives the patient a cool, fresh side, and prevents the mattress from being worn into bumps and hollows.

2. Put on the lower sheet, the broad hem to the head and the right side of the hem up; tuck it under the mattress well at the top and then all around. Keep the sheet perfectly straight, and draw it tight so there will be no wrinkles.

3. Place the upper sheet with the hem to the top and the right side of the hem down. Tuck this sheet in well at the foot and then pull down a little from the top to prevent its drawing tight over the patient's feet.

4. Washable woolen blankets being warm and light are the best cover for a bed. Place so the upper sheet will extend several inches beyond them toward the head, and tuck them well under the mattress at the foot. Turn back the extra inches of the sheet over the blanket. This protects the patient's face from the irritation caused by woolen substances touching the skin, and also protects the blankets from being soiled.

5. Tuck the top sheet and blankets in at the side of the mattress, not under it, so as to leave the covering free. Over all place a white washable spread, tucking it in at the foot, but leaving the sides to hang free.

6. Beat up the pillows well; put them at the head, the corners free of wrinkles, and your bed is ready for your patient.

THE SCHOOL.

THE TOWN PUMP A CHARITY.

As Much as a Free Bridge or Free Education.

According to current usage, public education means education provided by the community as a whole, in contradistinction from education provided by private means. It recognizes the principle that the commonwealth has a stake in the pupils, the young people, and that she means to guarantee her own future by seeing that they do not lack the means of improvement. It is education by the people, of the people, for the people. In other words, it is education by the public for the public good. And this education is free, as well as public. It does not mean charitable, by free. To say that a community in providing a benefit for itself is doing an act of charity is a solecism. A public school is no more a provision of charity than a town pump. It is free as the public hydrant is free or a street lamp is free. It is free to the individual, and to all individuals alike. The cost is borne by the community, like the cost of water, street light, public roads, bridges, and such like public conveniences; all of which are free. Nobody stultifies himself by calling a free bridge a charity.

This public free system of education is a school system; which implies the collection of young people for instruction and discipline. Public law and public sentiment are forms of education which have long borne upon young people. No one ever complains of having to support courts and prisons for bad boys, or calls it agrarianism! Or proposes to leave discipline wholly to parents, or to private enterprise! When society feels the sting of depravity, there is no stopping to listen to theories of government and individualism. Society takes vengeance. But public education aims to prevent crime and worthlessness by gathering the young people in schools, and forming their characters so that in after life they shall not be a public nuisance, but will ennoble the community.—Dr. Wm. H. RUFENER.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON III, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 19.

Text of the Lesson, Josh. vi, 8-20. Memory Verse, 20—Golden Text, Heb. xi, 30—Commentary Prepared by Rev. H. M. Stearns.

The title of this lesson is the fall of Jericho, and the verses assigned are as above or only verses 12 to 20, but I suggest nothing less than the whole chapter, with a glance at the preceding chapter and its connection with the present lesson, in which we saw the hand of the Lord dividing the Jordan for Israel to cross over, that all people might know and fear Him for their good. In chapter v we saw the rite of circumcision and the ordinance of the Passover, the one suggestive of death to the flesh, no good thing in us, and the other of redemption by the blood of the Lamb. Only this can the reproach of sin and of this evil world be taken from us (v, 10). In v, 12, we read that the manna ceased not until they had eaten the corn of the land, and the Lord changes not, yet some cannot trust Him for their daily bread. In v, 13-15, we see the real captain taking command and Joshua submissively taking his right place, instructed by the angel from that the whole affair was the Lord's and not his. Compare Ex. iii, 5, and contrast Josh. i, 3. Now, in chapter vi we have the victory at Jericho by the one mighty hand that divided the Red sea and the Jordan, and it was manifest to all that the Lord was with Joshua (vi, 27).

1-5. And the Lord said unto Joshua, See, I have given into thine hand Jericho. Thus He assured him, and then instructed him just what to do and told him what would happen, and, however unlikely or improbable it seemed, faith accepted the assurance and expected the result.

6-7. And Joshua, the son of Nun, called the priests and said unto them, Take up the ark of the covenant. The Lord wants a willing and obedient people on whose behalf and through whom He can show His power (Isa. i, 19; II Chron. xvi, 9). If we were only willing to be convicted foolish by the wisdom of this world, then the wisdom and the power of God would be seen in us.

8-11. So the ark of the Lord compassed the city, going about it once, and they came into the camp and lodged in the camp. Both Joshua and all the priests and the people perfectly obedient to the direct command of the Lord's host, implicit faith and unquestioning obedience are what God desires and desires in. No voice of man was heard, but just the sound of the trumpet as they marched this first time around the city, probably gazed upon in wonder by those in the city, who may have assembled on the walls to see this strange sight. What was accomplished? Seemingly nothing. But they obeyed God, and that is everything.

12-14. And the second day they compassed the city once and returned into the camp. So they did six days. Seven priests with seven trumpets, a perfect testimony to the power of the atonement which shall yet lead to the complete overthrow of all enemies, and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father (Rev. xvii, 14; Phil. ii, 11). The ark proclaims the righteousness which God demands and provides, and Isa. xxxiii, 1, 7, proclaims that a King shall reign in righteousness and the work of righteousness shall be peace. It may seem to some that this little is now being accomplished as was accomplished by those six days seemingly foolish and useless processions, but wait.

15. 16 Joshua said unto the people, Shout, for the Lord hath given you the city. Six times more around the city with no sound but that of the trumpet twelve times in all, and seemingly nothing accomplished, but God's time has now come. It is the thirteenth round when at Joshua's command the more than 900,000 voices break forth with a shout of victory because they believed God and obeyed His servant.

17-18. All the silver and gold and vessels of brass and iron are holiness unto the Lord (margin).

Therefore they were instructed not to take any for themselves, but to put all into the treasury of the Lord, while they utterly destroyed all the inhabitants except Rahab and her household.

20. The wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city. Just as the Lord had said so it came to pass, and it always will be so, for see Isa. xlv, 24; I's. xxxiii, 10, 11, and I therefore become as ever to say, "I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me" (Acts xxvii, 25), and act accordingly. The verses following tell us that all the living in the city, both man and beast, were utterly destroyed except Rahab and her household. The New Testament record of the overthrow of Jericho and the salvation of Rahab is summed up in the few lines of Heb. xi, 30, 31, and faith in God is the heart of it. The evidence of her faith and the assurance of her safety were the scarlet line in her window (chapter ii, 18, 21), and it is to me very interesting and suggestive that the Hebrew word translated "line" is the identical word which I's. xlii, 5; Jaxi, 5; Jer. xxix, 11, and elsewhere is translated "expectation" and "hope." Her expectation or hope was a scarlet one, and it was a sure one, and so the believer's expectation is as sure as the blood of Christ can make it. As all in Rahab's household were saved by her faith, let your faith take hold of God for all your household.

Forty Years' Torture.

To be relieved from a torturing disease after 40 years' torture might well cause the gratitude of anyone. That is what DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve did for C. Haney, Geneva, O. Mark went as directed and called up Uncle Daniel. He heard a movement of some one getting up, and presently the old man stood at the open door. "Uncle, I've got a message for you young mistress." "Who from?" "De po' white man what war hyar las' week will be little badder." "Nice man, dat. Hab he got in trouble?" "Nehder mind dat, uncle. Go in de house 'n wake up Missie Laura." "Ain't got no key." "Can't you wake up some one insid?" "Why don't you wait till mornin'?" "Can't do dat no how. Do message miss' he gien at once."

"Waal," said Daniel at last, "I do what I can for dat man; he berry fine gentleman he war po' white."

Mark followed the old man to the rear door of the basement. On the way a huge dog bounded at them, but seeing Daniel's fierceness ended in play. Daniel succeeded in waking a negro woman who slept within; the door was opened, and they stepped inside.

"Go tell Missie Laura a called gal want to speak to her right off. Say she got message from de man what war hyar will be little badder," said Daniel.

"At dis time o' night?" "Yas; do message miss' be delirious right away," said Mark. "Don't wake no one but Missie Laura. Tread softly."

The woman lighted a candle and went off with it grumbling, leaving Mark and Daniel in the dark. They waited for perhaps ten minutes, when they heard steps and saw the light returning. The negro woman was followed by Laura Fain, dressed in a wrapper. She knew Mark from the moment she saw him, but pretended only to see a negro girl.

"Hab message for yo', Missie Laura, but can't tell it to yo' widout dese niggers git away."

"Come with me."

She took the candle and led the way to the dining room above, leaving the two colored people below. Then she turned to Mark:

"Why in heaven's name did you come back here?"

"It was a choice between life and death. I escaped this evening from Chattanooga, where I was to be hanged to-morrow morning. Every place of concealment on this side of the river will be entered and searched. If concealed in this house, occupied by a family of white people and Confederates, I may not be found. Otherwise my recapture is certain."

She thought a moment, rubbing her palms together, as was her habit when excited. Then she called to the servants below:

"Go to bed, Uncle Daniel, and you, too, auntie. This girl is worn out by traveling, and I am going to fix a place for her to sleep."

Then turning to Mark she motioned him to follow her.

They went up two flights of stairs, stopping on tiptoe, and at last reached a landing from which a pair of steps led to a trap door.

"Up there," she whispered.

Mark climbed the stairs, pushed the trap open and entered the enclosure of the roof. Before lowering the ladder he looked back to whisper a "God bless you," but all was dark. Laura had gone.

CHAPTER XIV. MARK'S KEEPER.

She was standing on the ladder with the trap in her hand.

Mark stood for a moment looking about him. There were dormer windows, which let in the moonlight so that he could distinctly see everything in the room. Some trunks were piled in one corner, and in another some furniture. Among the latter he noticed a lounge with threadbare upholstery, and taking it in his arms, carried it, treading softly, to one of the windows at the front of the house. The room was very hot, and he raised the sash, moving it with great care, so as not to make any sound. Then he sat down on the lounge, and looking out of the window began to meditate on his situation.

While thus engaged he heard a light tap at the trap door. Opening it he saw a bundle extended by the fair hand of his preserver. He took it, and letting down the trap—Miss Fain did not utter a word—he unrolled it. There were complete suits of under and outer garments, the property of Miss Fain's brother.

The getting off of his damp garments and donning snow white linen was a grateful sensation to Mark. Having put on what he needed for the night he laid himself down on the lounge. From his window he could see the Tennessee rolling in the moonlight half a mile away. He thought how much more comfortable he was in his dry clothes than he had been floating in the water. Then he heard the bark of hounds. They were on the water's edge, and he knew by the sounds that they were endeavoring to pick up the scent of his tracks.

"Bark on," he said. "When I leave this I'll take with me something to do with. I'll not be taken alive, and if I meet you some of you shall roll over."

Then there came an inexpressible gratitude. He felt thankful to Souri, thankful to Jakey, thankful to Laura Fain, thankful to his God. There was something especially engaging in Miss Fain's efforts on his behalf, inasmuch as she regarded him an enemy to her country. He thought of Souri in prison waiting for old Triggs to discover her deception. What would they do to her? And Jakey? Would they injure a mere boy? He vowed that if he should escape and outlive the war he would find out just what had happened, and if either had been harshly treated he would have his revenge.

Musing he fell asleep, but he soon awoke. It was past midnight—the day of his execution. He shuddered.

He tried to go to sleep again, but the dreadful fate which would have been his had not Souri saved him, and on the very last evening before his intended execution, got into his head, and he could not drive it out. And now, were not men and hounds hunting him for miles around, to drag him back to Chattanooga to that dreadful jailyard, the scaffold, the rope, the black cap?

And Laura Fain, suppose she should weaken; suppose she should, after all, consider it her duty to give him up; suppose a demand should be made to search the house; suppose a thousand suggestions chased each other through his excited brain.

He lay tossing till just before dawn, when he again fell into a troubled slumber.

He was awakened by a squadron of cavalry passing along the road. The sun had not yet risen, but it was light. He could look right down on them, though they could not see him. They trotted along slowly, all looking worn and sleepy. They were evidently the men who had passed the night before, and were going back from an unsuccessful hunt. Mark noticed the different positions many of them took in order to rest in their saddles. The sight took him back to his own troop, and he longed to be in the stirrups again with them.

There is no time like a wakeful night to magnify distress, and nothing like an unclouded rising sun to drive it away. Mark looked out on the stretch of country to be seen from his window—the Tennessee and the mountains beyond, their tops tinged with yellow light—and was as unreasonably hopeful as he had been despondent. His pleasurable sensations suddenly received a new check. An officer of the cavalry that had passed, followed by two men, came riding back. Maybe they were coming to the house. They stopped at the gate. One of the men rode forward, dismounted and opened it. The officer entered and rode up to the front door.

Mark's heart seemed to stop beating. He could not see what was going on below so close under his window, but presently heard the officer talking to some one on the veranda.

"A Federal spy escaped last night from Chattanooga, madam. He was in the disguise of a negro girl. There was something more which was unintelligible."

Then Mark heard the word "no" spoken in a voice which he thought was Mrs. Fain's.

"He was tracked to the river, which he must have crossed. He probably landed a mile or two below Chattanooga, and we believe he is hiding somewhere within a few miles of this place."

"You are welcome to"—Mark could not hear to what the officer was welcome, but he surmised it was to search the house.

"What time did you go to bed?" The reply was inaudible.

"You saw nothing till then?" "No, sir."

"And everything was shut up at ten o'clock?" "Yes, sir."

"You are good Confederates, I reckon." "Yes, sir; my son"—Mark could not hear the rest, except the word "army."

"Well, with your permission, madam, we'll search"—The rest was lost. Indeed Mark was too terror stricken to listen with due care. He supposed the house would be ransacked.

In a moment his terror was turned to a delicious sense of relief. The officer, after calling to the men at the gate, rode around to the negro quarters.

But there was a danger in the search which would follow in the cabins. Daniel would remember the negro girl he had let in the night before, and would surmise that she was the person the men were looking for. Would Daniel betray him? He thought not. Daniel gave no hint, for presently Mark saw the trio ride away to join the troop.

Laura Fain had spent a night no more comfortable than Mark. The responsibility of a human life weighed upon her heavily. At one moment she would picture Mark's face, pale, haggard, despairing, as he would be dragged from his hiding place. The next she was conscience stricken at the part she was playing in shielding an enemy of her cause—the cause of her brother and her lover. She heard the dogs as Mark had heard them on the river bank, and lay shivering till the baying died away in the distance. Then in the morning she saw the cavalry go by; the officer came up and talk with her mother, whom he asked the negroes to call from her bed that he might question her about the presence of the spy. Laura got up herself and stood at the landing, listening breathless while they talked. When the men rode away she muttered a fervent "Thank God!"

As the morning brightened and it was time to rise, her fears were less intense, and she began to think of how she should keep her prisoner concealed from the rest of the household. How should she feed him? When her maid came up she told her that she would take her breakfast in her room, but surprised the girl by the large quantity of food she wanted brought to her. When the breakfast came, Laura was up and dressed. She directed the girl to set it on a table and then sent her to the stable with a message to Daniel about her riding pony. Her maid having gone, Laura took up the breakfast and carried it to the trap.

In another moment she was standing on the ladder with the trap in her hand, half her body below and half in the attic, regarding a handsome fellow looking very much like a gentleman in her brother's clothes. He in turn was regarding what he considered a very pretty picture in the half exposed figure of a young girl hobbling a tray in her hands on which he knew full well was a breakfast he was hungry for. Then he took the tray and laid it on the lounge.

It was the first time that Laura had seen Mark dressed becomingly. This was the man she had been instrumental in saving, the man she was protecting, the man she must exercise her wits to give an opportunity to get away to a land of safety from the latter. It was pleasant to see that he was good to look upon. What a fine brow, what a resolute mouth! Those locks argo-golden and fitted for a woman's head. The eyes are heavenly blue. And all this beauty holds a soul capable of plunging into the most frightful of dangers.

And this being, so dazzling to a young girl, scarcely twenty, was in her power. Could she not at a word give him over to an ignominious death? And could she not by care almost certainly insure his freedom? He was her slave, bound to her for more securely than Allen, her maid, who had been given her by her father. She could order him to crawl on the floor before her, and he would have to do so. She had once seen a woman enter a cage of a lion with only a slender whip in her hand, and the huge beast had obeyed her slightest motion. Mark was her lion, and she felt inclined to give him just one touch of the whip to see what he would do. She stepped into the room and let down the trap.

"Miss Fain," Mark said, "you cannot have any conception of the fervor of my gratitude. You stand between me and death—not the death of a soldier, but of a felon. And here," pointing to the breakfast, "you are ministering to my wants with your own hands."

"And yet I told you not to come here."

"I did not understand you so."

Mark was hurt. His heart was full of gratitude. He could not understand how, after doing and risking so much for him, she could blame him for throwing himself on her generosity.

"I am sorry that you regret your kindness," he added, with almost a tremble in his voice.

"I did not say that I regretted it."

"But you remind me that it is not agreeable to you."

"How can it be? You are a Yankee—a spy—and on a mission to discover the movements of our troops."

"Why, then, do you not give me up?" She shrugged her shoulders. "Can I turn executioner?"

"I see. I am indebted for my present safety to the fact that you do not care to do an unmannerly act."

"You must draw your own inference."

"But I should like to be grateful. How can I when you tell me that you do all this for me that your white hands may not have to stain upon them?"

"It is not necessary that you should feel grateful."

Mark studied her face for a moment earnestly. Then his manner changed.

"Miss Fain," he said, pointing, "take away the breakfast."

"Why so?" she asked, startled.

"I will not be under any further obligation to one who acts from pride rather than sweet charity. You have saved me from the horrors and from the gallows. Were it not for you I should now be either about to mount the scaffold or have passed by this time into that land where the only human attribute I can imagine as fitted to be there is charity."

Whether the danger is now passed from this neighborhood I don't know, but I am going to risk it. I am going down stairs and out from under this roof."

"You will do no such thing!" "I will!" And had she not placed herself between him and the trap he would have carried out his intention.

"Stay where you are!" she said in a voice in which there was something commanding.

"By what authority do you assume to direct me?" "Your life belongs to me."

"True," he bowed his head.

"You understand me." She spoke with even more authority than before. "I own you. I own your life. You are my slave in a stronger sense than my colored girl."

"It is that ownership of human beings, Miss Fain, coming down to you from past generations, that has given you the spirit to tyrannize over me now."

"I tyrannize?"

"There was a surprise that was not feigned. She did not realize what she was doing."

"Yes, never have I been so trodden upon as by you."

There was a submission in the young soldier's tone that satisfied the imperious girl. She was ready to heal the cuts she had given, but she waited for him to speak again.

"What do you wish me to do?" he asked.

"Remind me where you are till I regard it safe for you to go."

"Then you have a desire for my safety?" he asked, looking up at her quickly.

"You came here unbidden and placed yourself in my hands. Do you think it proper to come and go at your pleasure?"

Mark approached her, and bending low took her hand and kissed it. There was something in the act to remind her of the lion—after the training.

CHAPTER XV. SOURI AND JAKKY.

"What do you think I ought to do with you?"

It was scarcely more than fifteen minutes after Souri had bid Mark good-speed when old Triggs re-entered the prison grounds, and mounting the flight of steps leading to the second story went into the jail. No one seemed to be about the place. He entered his bedroom and found his wife dozing in her chair by the window. He asked for the colored girl, and his wife told him that she had not yet returned with the medicine. He waited, expecting every minute that she would come in. Had he not noticed an absence of the grunts to which the supposed invalid had been trotting him all the evening he might have waited for Souri without a movement much longer than he did. As it was, it occurred to him that perhaps the prisoner might be dead.

Taking up a tallowdip he went to the room where Mark was supposed to be confined. A figure was lying in the corner. The jailer went to it, and by means of the candle saw what he supposed to be the prisoner. The face was to the wall, and he did not at first discover the deception.

"Yank," he said, "air y' dead?" No answer.

He took hold of the figure's shoulder and shook it.

Still no reply.

Turning Souri over he at once recognized the face of the "mulatto girl."

In an instant he saw through the ruse that had been practiced. Without stepping to interrogate her, he rushed from the room past the sentinel at the door and out to the guardhouse. There he gave the alarm, and in a moment the whole guard was in motion.

Souri hoped that the sentinel at the door would join in the chase, in which event she intended to go to Jakey's room, get him out and attempt to escape. But the soldier only went as far as the door at the head of the long staircase. Then, remembering that he would doubtless be punished for letting one prisoner escape, and that there were several negroes in the "black hole" for him to guard, he went no farther.

In five minutes Souri heard the barking of hounds without.

No word was sent to headquarters regarding Mark's escape till the hounds had followed the scent to the river and there lost it. Then one of the guards was sent in to report the whole affair. Being an infantryman, he was obliged to walk, which took time. Cavalry was the only arm of the service capable of following the escaped man with a chance of success, and cavalry must be ferried across the river or ordered from Dallas, on the other side, ten miles above. The latter course was chosen, and two squadrons were directed to proceed at once, the one to throw a chain guard across the neck of Moccasin point, the other to scour the river bank for a distance of several miles below. Had there been any cavalry nearer, Mark would have had a very slender chance to get away. As it was, he barely escaped one of the squadrons.

About noon of the day after Mark's escape the military authorities began to relax their efforts to recapture him, as they had other matters of importance to attend to, but they induced the country people, by hope of a reward, to continue the search within a radius of ten or fifteen miles from Chattanooga. The provost marshal sent for Souri and Jakey with a view to gaining from them whatever he might concerning Mark's identity and his mission.

Souri, whose only clothing was that left her by Mark, begged Mrs. Triggs to get her more suitable apparel before being taken out of the jail. Had the old woman any excuse, indeed had it not been for the presence of the guard at the door, there is no telling what she might have done to Souri. To have been thus duped put her in a towering passion. She went into Souri's cell and berated her with her tongue and shook her fist in her face, but refrained from touching her. When Souri asked for a woman's dress she at first flatly refused, but fearing she would incur the displeasure of the provost marshal still further than she had if she should send a girl to him not properly dressed she selected an old calico frock of her own and gave it to her.

Souri and Jakey were led to the marshal's office, followed by a crowd of curious people, who were aware that they had been the means of the escape of a spy, but when they arrived the crowd were left outside.

Never was a man more puzzled what to do with prisoners than the marshal in the case of Souri and Jakey. He saw a simple, modest, poor white country girl, apparently not out of her "teens," and a stupid looking boy, who was not very far into them.

"Who are you?" he asked of Souri not unkindly.

"Missouri Slack."

"Where do you live?" "On the Anderson road, not far from Jasper."

"And this boy?" "He's my brother."

"When did you come from home?" "Three days ago."

"What brought you, or how did you know that the prisoner was here and in jail?" "Jakey sent me word."

"This boy?" "Yes."

"How?" "He sent me a silk handkercher what I give tother on."

"How did you send it, boy?" "Niggers."

"Um."

"Well, you two are pretty young to be engaged in such mischief."

The officer looked at them with interest and vexation mingled. He had lost a prisoner for whom he was responsible, but he could not but wonder at such a dull looking boy achieving so difficult a task as sending the communication, and could not but admire the sacrifice made by the girl.

A Weak Stomach

Indigestion is often caused by over-eating. An eminent authority says the harm done thus exceeds that from the excessive use of alcohol. Eat all the good food you want but don't overload the stomach. A weak stomach may refuse to digest what you eat. Then you need a good digestant like Kodol, which digests your food without the stomach's aid. This rest and the wholesome tonics Kodol contains soon restore health. Dieting unnecessary. Kodol quickly relieves the feeling of fullness and bloating from which some people suffer after meals. Absolutely cures indigestion.

REPAIR THAT LOOM.

Berea College has secured a market for homespun and home-woven goods, such as bed coverlets, linen, dress linsey, jeans, blankets, etc., at following prices:—

Coverlets, $4 to $6; Linen, 40 to 50 cents a yard; Dress Linsey, 50 cents a yard; Jeans, 60 cents a yard; Blankets, natural brown wool or bark dyes, $3 a pair.

White linsey and white blankets are not in demand only on orders. Coverlets must be 2 yards (72 inches) wide, and 24 yards (90 inches) long. All dyes used must be old fashioned home-made dyes.

Any woman who wants to sell coverlets or homespun to Berea College should find out what the College wants before beginning to weave or spin. For information apply in person or by letter to

Mrs. Hettie W. Graham,
Berea, Ky.

The Worn Form.

Multitudes are singing the praises of Kodol, the new discovery which is making so many sick people well and weak people strong by digesting what they eat, by cleansing and sweetening the stomach and by transforming their food into the kind of pure, rich, red blood that makes you feel good all over. Mrs. Cranfill, of Troy, I. T., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia which grew into the worst form. Finally I was induced to use Kodol and after using four bottles I am entirely cured. I heartily recommend Kodol to all sufferers from indigestion and dyspepsia. Take a dose after meals. It digests what you eat. For sale by East End Drug Co.

My Lungs

"An attack of la grippe left me with a bad cough. My friends said I had consumption. I then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it cured me promptly."

A. K. Randles, Nokomis, Ill.

You forgot to buy a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral when your cold first came on, so you let it run along. Even now, with all your hard coughing, it will not disappoint you. There's a record of sixty years to fall back on.

Three alone: 25c. enough for an ordinary cold, 50c. just right for bronchitis, hoarseness, hard cold, etc. (It is most economical for chronic cases and to keep on hand.)

A Typical South African Store.

O. R. Larson, of Bay Villa, Sundays River, Cape Colony, conducts a store typical of South Africa, at which can be purchased anything from the proverbial "needle to an anchor." This store is situated in a valley nine miles from the nearest railway station and about twenty-five miles from the nearest town. Mr. Larson says: "I am favored with the custom of farmers within a radius of thirty miles, to many of whom I have supplied Chamberlain's remedies. All testify to their value in a household where a doctor's advice is almost out of question. Within one mile of my store the population is perhaps sixty. Of these, within the past twelve months, no less than fourteen have been absolutely cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This must surely be a record." For sale by S. E. WELCH, JR.
